The Cholera
Correspondence of the N. Y. [illegible] Tribune.

CONSTANTINOPLE, August [illegible], 1865.

When I wrote two weeks ago, it had just become apparent that we were to be scourged with the Asiatic cholera. The official returns then reported [illegible] cases a day. The epidemic is now fairly upon us with all its horrors. The official reports give the number of deaths now at two hundred and fifty a day, but it is plain enough [illegible] the number of dead and dying seen in the streets that this is far below the real mortality in the city, and it does not include at all the military garrison of some 60,000 men, among whom it is understood to be raging. Twenty-six deaths [illegible] arrived to my office yesterday. What would be the mortality in New York, the population of which is less than that of Constantinople, if twenty-six dead were carried in a day through [illegible] alone, for example. I do not think the deaths can now fall short of 400 to 500 a day. They probably exceed the number.

CHARACTER OF THE DISEASE

The disease as it now exists here has all the very worst [illegible] of Asiatic cholera in its most malignant form. It is raging with daily increasing [illegible] in spite of the most healthful weather possible. For a week we have had a strong, cool wind from the Black Sea sweeping through the Bosphorus and the heat has been very moderate.

I mentioned in my last letter a new fact which has been observed in reference to the cholera, viz: that it required six days for incubation. Another proof of this has come under my knowledge. The cholera appeared in the village of Bebeck, at the Jesuit College, ten days ago, from special causes. There were three deaths. No other case occurred in the village for eight days, but at the end of that time two days ago, several cases appeared simultaneously in the French College and in different parts of the village.

SANITARY MEASURES TAKEN BY GOVERNMENT

The Government has displayed more energy and spirit in this crisis than it ever did before in any thing. No money has been spared, no time has been lost in taking every conceivable precaution. The city has been thoroughly cleaned, and clean [illegible] both in the streets and houses is carefully enforced. Physicians have been appointed in all quarters of [illegible] medicine gratis and attend on every one who wishes advice. Cholera hospitals have been opened, to which the poor are at once removed when taken. Public funerals are forbidden, and bodies are buried at once. The sale of cucumbers, [illegible] and other things which tend to produce cholera is prohibited, although strangely enough watermelons are freely sold, under the impression that they are peculiarly light and healthy food.

The large Turkish fleet has been sent off to cruise in the Black Sea.

We undoubtedly owe it to these precautions that the cholera is not now decimating the city.

PANIC AMONG THE PEOPLE

The panic among the people is positively awful. I do not doubt that scores die every day of simple fright. Indeed, the Turks themselves relate a story to illustrate this. A man they say, was once journeying in the interior of Turkey, when he met the Pestilence. "Where are you from?" "From killing two thousand men in Smyrna," replied the Pestilence. "That is a lie," said the man; "I know that you have killed six thousand there." "No," said the Pestilence, "I killed only two thousand, and Fear killed four thousand."

One of the most horrible tragedies I have known occurred day before yesterday. Stephen Effendi, the civil head of the Protestant community in Turkey, was living with his only son in Stamboul. On Monday he was suddenly seized with cholera and died in a few hours. The same night the son evidently in a panic of fear, set fire to the house, in which his father's body still remained, and hung himself. The bodies were found by the firemen and carried into the streets, where they were found by friends who took them in charge.

The excitement seems to be increasing, and what it will end in it is hard to see. Some are drowning their fears in drink, and making even the night hideous with their saturnalias.

Half the physicians appointed by Government on fabulous salaries have fled from their posts in dismay, or deserted them on plea of sickness. Business is at a stand still. The Government offices are almost all closed. The Pasha of Egypt, who fled to this city to escape the cholera there, has now fled from us and gone back to Alexandria, where the crisis of the epidemic has passed.

APPEARANCE OF THE CHOLERA ELSEWHERE.

The telegraph informs us that the Pilgrims from Mecca have reached Bagdad, and that the cholera has broken out there in its worst form. In Smyrna it is still raging with unabated force. It has also appeared on the Danube, at Galatz, and in Southern Russia, at Odessa. In short, there is every reason to believe that it is following the same great route which it took on its first appearance in Europe, and the terrible scenes which were then witnessed can hardly fail to be repeated. The deaths in Constantinople thus far have been chiefly among the Jews and the poorer classes of Turks and Christians. Very few Europeans have died.

HOW CHOLERA IS SUCCESSFULLY TREATED.

It may be said that cholera in its first stage can always be successfully treated, unless the system is weakened by other diseases, by dissipation, or by some special cause.

The Rev. Dr. Hamlin's Cholera Mixture—equal parts by weight of liquid laudanum, spirits of camphor and tincture of rhubarb—has been used here not only by him, but by many others, with the greatest success in arresting the first stages of the disease. If diarrhœa is carefully kept off by the use of this mixture the danger of cholera is very slight.

In the second stage of relapse and cramps, clear brandy taken internally, mustard plasters and other means of keeping up internal heat by friction, etc., are very often used with success. There is always hope in cholera until the patient is actually dead, and in severe cases recovery often depends upon the persistency and energy with which the disease is met and attacked at every stage.

The [illegible] DAILY MAIL [illegible] the following statement of facts regarding the Overland Mail Service [illegible] coming from a gentleman connected with the Stage Company. We copy from the [illegible]:

The California Stage Company took the Oregon mail contract in 1860 for four years. The contract expired September 15th, 1864. The contract price was $90,000 per annum. This was the first daily mail and was an experiment. It [illegible] being responsible they carried the contract faithfully to the end of the term [illegible] Before this contract expired the Post Office Department [illegible] for service [illegible] September [illegible] 1864, to the thirtieth day of June 1868. The only bidders were the old contractors at $200,000. After a proper [illegible] General [illegible] gave the contract from September 15th, 1864, to June 30th, 1865 to the old contractors and then advertised for bids for the following year. Again the only bidders were the California Stage Company at $200,000. The bids were opened March 15th. The Department, with a new man at the head (Mr. Dennison) kicked against the bid, and after much delay telegraphed to [illegible] would only give $200,000 [illegible] by telegraph. They respectfully declined. Then the Postmaster General hawked the contract about and solicited anybody and everybody to take it, and at last they found Mr. [illegible] who took it not at $200,000, but [illegible] Mr. Roseville's agent arrived here five days before the contract expired [illegible] the [illegible] found that the California Stage Company were willing [illegible] the mail for a week or a month [illegible] arrangements. He went over the road and found that the only way he could carry out his contract was to employ the same number [illegible] coaches to the California Stage Company employed, and at [illegible] he [illegible] by telegraph [illegible] was advised to let the California Stage Company take the contract off his hands at $225,000 and return to New York. The California Stage Company would not take the contract off Mr. Roseville's hands [illegible] advised by his agent and the agent departed for New York.

The California Stage Company entered into contract with the Postal Agent [illegible] continue the service until the Department [illegible] advised of the abandonment by [illegible] Postmaster General abrogated that contract [illegible] September, and since that time we have had no daily mail. Now the Department [illegible] Chamber of Commerce says we can have no mail except by sea, and talks about extortion. When and how? It shows that the Department don't know anything about the matter.

The action of the old contractors don't look like extortion since they have carried the mail since June 30th at their own expense, and at a great loss, and that solely for the accommodation of the public. They will now haul off their stock because they cannot afford to take the mail at the price dictated by the Post Office Department. If they were extortionists would they do all they have done as above? The price they ask for the service is much cheaper [illegible] than that paid for the inefficient service of Holladay's Overland Mail. The fact is our Members of Congress and those from Oregon have neglected this important matter and we of this coast have to suffer from the false economy and ignorance of the Postmaster General.

"TO BLACKFOOT" IS THE WATCHWORD. It is almost impossible to ask a civil question, or enlarge an acquaintance with the common "how d'ye do," now a days, without receiving in reply "Blackfoot!" so intense is the excitement. It does occur to us that those starting for that country at this late season of the year, with a view to working in the mines, would profit by remaining where they are until spring. From private letters received from that country we learn that the mining season is about to close on account of cold weather, that provisions are scarce, and prices high, while there is but little prospect of a change in the market. It is a matter of impossibility to get transportation across the Rocky mountains from the present time until spring, even if the necessary supplies were obtainable on the other side, and our limited means of transportation on this side, will not be a "drop in the bucket" toward supplying the thousands who are now there, and still going, like so many mad men; but even admitting that we have ample supplies and ready means of transportation—which undoubtedly we have not—we ask in all candor, what do men expect to accomplish by going to these mines, without provisions or money, and at this late season of the year? They themselves cannot answer this question; yet they are going—they "have got reliable news from there and it's rich!" We do not doubt that those mines are rich, on the contrary, we have every reason to believe that they are very rich, and, also, extensive; but is that good and sufficient reason that men should become frantic and through madness, jeopardize their lives? If the mines are rich now, will they not be so still, when spring comes? But, say some, "we must get there first in order to get claims." The idea of getting there first, when more than a month since, the population did not fall but little short of twenty thousand. If those who go to these mines hereafter succeed in getting claims, without purchasing them, they will in all probability be under the necessity of prospecting for them, and not among the diggings already discovered. Prudence would dictate, that the better policy for the excited populace to pursue, would be to wait until spring, and then go prepared.

In conclusion we will say that what is stated above, in regard to the probable condition of things in the Blackfoot mines the coming winter is not a matter of prediction, but, as we may say, absolute knowledge. We have drawn our conclusions from facts that are too glaring to be misinterpreted. First we know something in regard to the vast number of people already in these mines. Secondly, we are well posted in regard to the amount of supplies on hand, and thoroughly advised as to the means of transportation, and are well aware that during the winter months freight cannot be taken into these mines by any possible mode of conveyance. Hence, we conclude that in one month's time—after the trail closes—there will not be two month's supply in the camp.—Idaho Radiator.

MONDAY MORNING, OCTOBER [illegible]

The Railroad – Wealth of the Valley

The second biennial message of the Governor Gibbs delivered to the Legislative session of 1864, contains some of the statistics of the wealth of the Willamette Valley which are worth reviewing at this time.

[illegible] message speaks of the necessity and [illegible] of providing the State with means of internal transportation and communication together with the reports [illegible] upon the above subject, and he recommended the construction of a railroad to connect the Willamette, Umpqua, and Rogue River valleys, to be built by the proceeds of bonds secured by the lands through which it runs.

Within the sub-divisional surveys of the Willamette valley, lying between the Cascade and Coast ranges of mountains it appears that there is, in round numbers, 4,000,000 acres of land, 2,000,000 of which are first class arable lands, while the remaining [illegible] acres lying among the [illegible] hills is well adapted to grazing and all of husbandry. One third of this land lying in a strip running through the center of the valley [illegible] long by twelve miles wide, was estimated as being worth eight dollars per acre, or $8,000,000, and the remaining 2,000,000 of acres at $2 per acre, or $4,000,000. The town property of the valley was estimated at $3,000,000, giving a total of real estate in the Willamette valley in 1864 of $15,000,000. The remarkable advancement made in all branches of industry and the large gain of population since the date of the message must give a larger proportion of valuation.

A railroad from Portland to Eugene City could be built at a cost not exceeding $50,000 per mile. The distance being 115 miles makes a total cost of such road $5,750,000—the estimate including everything for furnishing and putting the road in complete running order. The Governor then calculates the enhanced value of real estate along the line at $19,000,000, which would be more than sufficient means to build three roads. The estimates are certainly within the bounds of reason. That the road could be built to better advantage than the same distance in any other part of the State does not admit of a doubt, and that the intrinsic value of the lands on each side of it is not surpassed by any in the Union, is certain, and when once there is a cheap and speedy mode of transporting its products at all seasons of the year to the sea board, and putting them on the highway of nations for the market of the world, there is not much doubt that they will realize in value the highest estimates of the message. The estimates of value may be reduced one half and still have enough to build the road in the enhanced value of the lands through which it will run.

The report of the Superintendent of surveys on the cost of construction and estimated revenue of a branch of the Central Pacific Railroad from Marysville, California, "to the Columbia river" in Oregon, includes an estimate of the earnings of such road, which is placed at $9,200,000 per annum, based upon the condition of the country at the time of the estimate, 1864. From this amount is deducted—

Running expenses, $4,000 per mile per annum	$2,000,000
Annual repairs,	1,000,000
Total expenses	$3,000,000
Net earnings	5,000,000

which is 18⅓ per cent on $30,000,000, the estimated cost of the construction of the whole line.

A valley railroad is strenuously opposed by the California and Oregon Company, who undertake to prove that a road "from Portland" south would be a profitless concern. While we are favorable to all improvements calculated for the benefit of the whole northwestern territory, and especially the commonwealth of Oregon, we dislike to see Portland rated as one of the sources of "opposition" to the stupendous enterprise. On this subject of opposition to the road, an extract is quoted in the prospectus of the company, from an article written by Hon. F. A. Chenoweth, which does this city great injustice. Judge Chenoweth takes the ground that a valley road is not what the people of the valley need. That they would still have no communication with the outward world of commerce. The work is not strictly local we are ready to concede, but the evidences we are permitted to enjoy certainly, at this time, and for a great many years to come favor the building of a valley road.

The present advantages of transit to and from sea, at this port, are quite as valuable to the business of the valley now as they could well be at the time hence, spoken of by Judge Chenoweth when ships must necessarily be brought into use that could not reach Portland on account of the Columbia river bar. It is now that the people of this valley want the benefits of cheap and speedy transportation. It is at this time they stand more greatly in need of the means of placing their products on the market. Let the future take care of itself. When the country becomes so fully developed that commerce is obliged to seek Puget Sound as a harbor, there will very likely be means afforded to reach it, but just now and for many years to come, the magnitude of trade cannot be of that proportion, and the field opened for a valley road is one which we deem quite inviting to capitalists.

ROAD AGENTS.—From the Montana Post of Sept. 2d, we learn the following particulars of the proceedings of some "Road Agents," with which that country is infested, and had it not been for the timely organization of a Vigilance Committee would, ere this, been overrun. The Post in speaking of this affair, says: "On Monday last about nine o'clock A. M. Messrs. Taylor and Blodgett were travelling on their road to Salt Lake, about twenty five miles from Virginia City, in Cedar Canon, when they were attacked by four men on foot with blackened faces. Blodgett was killed at sight, two balls striking him, one in the back of the head and the other in the shoulder. His partner made his escape and sent word to his father by a man returning to Nevada. He himself after burying the body which he hauled to Price's Ran[ch], he some twenty miles further on, made quick time to Salt Lake City. The Vigilance Committee with a promptness that did them great credit at once verbaqled Mr. Taylor, the sole witness of the affair, and as we hear, made a thorough investigation of the case. Mr. Taylor is now on his way to Salt Lake."

UNITED STATES STEAMER.—The Saginaw, a fine iron Government steamer, paid Puget Sound a visit recently. She is reported as being a formidable looking vessel manned by two hundred and twenty men, and is armed with four [illegible] Dahlgren and two 100 pounder Parrott guns.

PERSONAL.—B. F. Dowell, Esq., editor of the Jacksonville Sentinel, called upon us last evening. He has been absent from home about one month visiting Walla Walla attending to important law cases at that city and elsewhere. He will also be ready to call at the Sentinel office.

CAMP POLK.—Capt. [illegible] has established a camp with the above name on a stream called Squaw creek at the junction of the Eugene and Santiam roads. The camp is on the west side of the Des Chutes river and about thirty miles from Warm Spring Reservation.

OLIVE CREEK.—This stream is a tributary of John Day's river. During the summer several mining companies have been doing exceedingly well there and with a sufficient population it is likely to rise to the importance of a great mining camp.

CHEAP FARE.—Fare from Idaho City to Umatilla last week was placed at $10 as the result of opposition.

By Overland Telegraph.

Bonds for the Irish Republic

NEW YORK, Oct. [illegible]—The Times [illegible] says the steamers City of [illegible] and [illegible] which sailed from this port on Saturday are said to have taken out a million in bonds for the use of the embryo Irish Republic. It is currently reported that as soon as these [illegible] bonds [illegible] [illegible] The bonds have nearly all been subscribed by many people whom the government little suspects. On the other hand the British government claims to have knowledge of all bonds and have an agent on board the steamers in question who will at the proper moment [illegible] and turn them over to the home government. In all probability both these steamers will be thoroughly searched before going to Queenstown, at least before any passengers or freight are allowed to land. War vessels are by this time stationed at Queenstown for this express purpose.

General News

[illegible] Roebuck [illegible] writes that the documents taken from the person of Col. Dahlgren after he was killed, were forgeries.

In France there are rumors of ministerial changes shortly, also of some Government reforms, including more liberty of the press.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Sept. [illegible]—The Convention has adopted a memorial to the President asking for a general amnesty and pardon. It also resolved that the people of Alabama having given unmistakable signs of loyalty, they therefore request the removal of the U. S. troops. The State Constitution and amendments were adopted as a whole and the resolution of adjournment provides that the Convention may be called together on or before the 1st of September, 1866.

NEW YORK, Oct. [illegible]—It seems after all that the result of the North Carolina elections is not an overwhelming Union triumph, as many [illegible] David and Vance were elected [illegible] candidates.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—On last January there were general military hospitals with thousands of patients under treatment. At the present time there are but 40 containing but [illegible] patients and with the aid of thoroughly scientific surgical assistance, together with a liberal expenditure of money for wooden legs, arms and [illegible] the medical department are rapidly reducing that number.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—It is confidently believed by persons in high official positions that a formidable combination exists to force through Congress a bill for at least a partial assumption of the rebel debt.

The battalion raised in California which was attached to the Massachusetts quota will now be paid in full.

[illegible] LEVIATHAN.—About a month since Mr. Ward [illegible] below this city while engaged one Sat[urday] [illegible] boat, heard a noise as if something [illegible] the bottom of his craft. Looking out, he [illegible] what at first he took to be a large [illegible] be a monster [illegible] and under the boat and [illegible] No more was seen of the serpent until [illegible], when Mr. [illegible] passing down the Willamette slough [illegible] a cargo. Near the mouth of [illegible] which puts into the slough from the island [illegible] miles above St. Helens [illegible] and being ignorant of its presence in the water [illegible] and without any means of [illegible] as they would have easily [illegible] had they [illegible] The serpent presents an appearance not very greatly unlike the [illegible] in length and would measure [illegible] the body. It is of a [illegible] a huge sea serpent out of his latitude. Messrs. Sawtell were within a [illegible] to be attempting to [illegible] distance from the water making [illegible] covered it turned [illegible] across the slough. They will go [illegible] trip in future and we may yet [illegible] in the hands of his captors.

[illegible] —The Astoria Gazette [illegible] story of a dog owned at Astoria [illegible] Bone. It is a case of "[illegible]." The story goes on to say that one day last week [illegible] in question visited Clatsop Landing, where [illegible] a trick worthy the consideration of almost [illegible] in order to divest himself of the vermin [illegible] about for some light substance in order to con[illegible], he finally succeeded in securing a [illegible], which he put in his mouth, and then went [illegible] river bank and backed slowly into the water [illegible] appear to go on to his head. As soon [illegible] himself that the fleas were all near [illegible] of wool he entirely submerged himself [illegible] same time, let go the wool with the [illegible] had up and found literally laden with fleas.

INDIAN FIGHT.—The [illegible] an Indian fight which occurred [illegible] Springs, on Silver [illegible] River on the [illegible] fifteen men of the Oregon Infantry under Capt. Williams and about one hundred Snake Indians. It seems the Capt. Williams was out [illegible] upon the Indians, who immediately fled. Pursu[ing] them a short distance he called [illegible] surrounded by a large party of savages. He at once turned about for camp and literally fought his way back. In this very sharp engagement Capt. [illegible] had three men wounded and the Indians lost fifteen killed, besides a [illegible] number of stock. Fearing that the Indians might [illegible] him at his camp he fell back to [illegible] without further loss or other occurrence worthy of note. There is a great likelihood that the vigorous measures lately initiated against these Indians will bring them to [illegible] and all that is needed to do it is plenty [illegible] the same kind of fighting as that which [illegible]

[illegible] were entered [illegible] Mr. H. [illegible] received the first premium [illegible] Mr. [illegible] Stinson received the second premium on [illegible]

Mr. Walling of the [illegible] exhibition numerous and very worthy specimens of printing, receiving the first premium.

Wm. [illegible] & Co. of Portland received first premiums for book binding and for model [illegible] Block in Portland, which was a handsome design in [illegible] board.

Dr. Skiff of Salem exhibited a very elaborate cabinet of artificial teeth, taking first premium.

Drs. Chapman & Watkins exhibited a case of surgical instruments including over seventy different styles of the latest improved patterns for surgeon, dentist and aurist.

In the Home or Ladies department we had quite a large and varied assortment. Mrs. Monell, Milliner and Dressmaker of Portland, had a case of ladies bonnets and hats on exhibition that were a credit to her handiwork and good taste, and for which the judges awarded her five premiums.

Mrs. D. Strang of Salem exhibited a woolen rag carpet which took the first premium, also a handsome quilt. Mrs. Davidson of Marion county had seventy yards of linsey woolsey, home made, on exhibition and received the first premium. Mrs. D. McAlpine had a nice pair of pillow slips, and took the first premium on them. Miss Minnie Wineberg, of Portland, had on exhibition some elegant specimens of zephyr worsted pictures, four in all, which took the first and second premiums. She had also [illegible] slippers [illegible] embroidered and finished in accordance with the latest style.

Mrs. J. C. Son and Mrs. Rudd took premiums respectively for white quilts.

Mrs. Beckart got the first premium for the best embroidered infant's cloak. A ladies' dress by the same lady took a first premium.

Worsted tidy—a pretty thing, manufactured by Miss Holman, took a premium.

Toilet cushion, Mrs. Breyman, first premium.

Wax flowers—Mrs. J. R. Moores first premium.

Sofa cushion, Miss A. Luelling, second premium.

Sofa cushion—Mrs. Plamondon, first premium.

Gold quartz—Union Co., Santiam, first premium.

Silver quartz—shown by Santiam, first premium.

For all kinds of preserves—Mrs. Gilbert, first premium.

Fruit—Miller & Lambert, first premium; Seth Luelling, first premium.

Grover & Baker Sewing Machine—Agent for the machine first premium for embroidered cloak, first premium for embroidered infants' dress, first premium.

Wilcox & Gibbs' Sewing Machine—second premium.

Premiums were awarded to so many and such a variety of things, that it would be useless to try to enumerate them. Suffice it to say that all who were deserving received premiums, and those who did not have [illegible] for the future by learning lessons from others success.

The attendance throughout was quite large, and the weather most beautiful. I do not think however that the attendance has been as large as in the two former seasons, yet the receipts of the Society must show very well as there has been nothing added to the Agricultural Fair to attract people or call upon them for money. The farmers who have been in attendance all attest their appreciation of the Society, and the few counties not represented this year will in all probability turn out handsomely at the next Fair, and those coming in 1867 will be sure to return in 1868. So I may conclude by saying that the Oregon State Agricultural Society is a permanent fixture and a decided benefit to the farmer, the mechanic, the stock raiser and the State at large.

I regret that I am not able to send you a copy of the annual address delivered by Rev. H. K. Hines. It was able, and pleasantly delivered. The speaker entered upon the subject with a spirit worthy of the cause and his hearers were abundantly paid for the time occupied in listening to the address. In conclusion let me urge upon the Society the necessity for more permanent improvements and better buildings upon the grounds. The temporary establishments of [illegible] and stages in the avenues all look very [illegible]. The Society must now turn its attention [illegible] improvements for the benefit of the ground, and they should be commenced immediately. The [illegible] should be removed, [illegible] should be placed and the booths and stalls [illegible] made to conform more to the purpose for which they are designed. The people of Salem have need to be proud of the grounds and should aid in beautifying the premises.

The [illegible] of the Blackfoot [illegible] has been [illegible] Blackfoot City is situated on the west side of the great American divide, 90 miles northeast of the mouth of Hell Gate river, 60 miles north west of Virginia City, 150 miles west of Fort Benton, 250 miles a little northeast from Lewiston. The valleys of Hell Gate and Deer Lodge are reported rich and fertile. The Prickly Pear country lies southeast of Blackfoot City. The Little Black[foot] [illegible] the east thirty miles are the [illegible] northwest the Big Blackfoot [illegible] thousand and one tributaries and near by are Washington, Jefferson, McClelland, [illegible] and other gulches, apparently precursory to a mining region of boundless wealth opened only for the short space of two months, but reasonable to suppose, one year hence a region second not even to California in her palmiest days. Some of the miners are making daily runs taking as high as $1,500 to a set of sluices while the majority of claims yield from two to three ounces to the hand each day.

The [illegible] miles south east Florence Basin is reported to be in a fair way of developing rich lodes. A shaft has been sunk 40 feet on the Florence lodge, disclosing a vein from 10 to 18 inches in thickness. A tunnel has been commenced 100 feet below the shaft. Rock will be taken out during the winter. A [illegible] weighing [illegible] and 12,100lbs valued at $10,1[illegible] was made from rock of the Florence lodge [illegible] county.

The merchants and traders of Lewiston complain very much of not being able to get their freight taken to the Blackfoot country on account of the scarcity of pack trains. They are giving [illegible] cents per pound from that place. R. H. [illegible] of Placerville, furnishes the Idaho World with an account of the late prospecting trip up the Malheur river. He reports having found nothing that would pay. One of the party, O. H. [illegible], was shot and killed by Indians on the 5th September. [illegible] was one of the [illegible] and "Living Skeleton" company of showmen, that traveled through the country a picture show. Several of the party are desirous to organize another company to go into the same country with a different purpose. They found unmistakable indications of large [illegible] in the country in the possession of the Snakes. It is now proposed to go and give them [illegible] to [illegible] Probably hundreds of the horses which the Indians have run off from the whites could be taken.

Gen. Schenck on the Policy of the President

In a recent speech in Portsmouth, Ohio, Gen. Schenck repeated the statements made previously at Chillicothe in relation to the policy of the President. He said in the course of his Portsmouth address:

I may be allowed to say here, that I had an interview with the President just before I left Washington, some ten days ago, before coming home to meet my fellow citizens in the canvass for the approaching election. I sought that interview for the purpose of informing myself as to his views in reference to the executive power, and his general purpose as to the restoration of the rebellious States. I knew that the frankness of his character, his devotion to the country, the energy with which, having determined in his own mind what is right, he would pursue it to the end. I knew the resolve which he boldly expressed on the floor of the Senate, in the commencement of this struggle, denouncing the traitors as they deserved, and I knew that though he might make some mistake, there could be no mistake about his patriotism, and that that resolution would be carried out to its fullest extent. With this confidence in our chief ruler I sought an interview with him.

In that interview I expressed to him the doubt and jealousy that existed in the minds of the people of the country, and especially in the minds of the people of Ohio—doubts whether, under the policy he adopted, we were not going too fast in bringing back by untried processes these rebel States into full communion with those that had never felt the Union fold. I told him that that doubt might perhaps rest on a misunderstanding as to the extent to which he proposed to carry that policy. I said, and I think you will justify me in having said so, that if his purpose was to establish temporary governments, experimental in their nature, by the appointment of these provisional officers, in order to test their disposition to go ahead and come back in good faith, and with the full purpose of abiding by their obligations to the national government; and if, in addition to that, he proposes to keep enough of the military power stationed in different parts of the late rebellious States to supervise their conduct, and reach forward the strong hand, if necessary, to keep them in the right way, we would be satisfied with such experiments. And, moreover, I said we would be better satisfied still if we should definitely understand that it was no purpose of the Executive to forestall the action of Congress, the representatives of the people, but that when they should assemble and determine whether, in addition to having their local executive privilege in the States, these people were ready to return to full communion with the Government, by being represented in the counsels of the Nation.

I am glad to be able to say that assurance I had from the President justifies me in saying that although this was the policy he meant to pursue, it was only an experiment. He said that he had no purpose of interfering with the action of Congress. The experiments being made were but a preparation of these people for a better and more improved condition. And so far as keeping watch over them by armed force is concerned, he pointed to what had taken place in Richmond, Virginia, and assured me that where they acted in bad faith by selecting men for office because they were rebels, the military would be ready to sweep away their work. [Cheers.]

With this understanding, I for one, as a citizen of Ohio, and representing a portion of her people, stand here to-day, giving my unqualified support to the course pursued now by our President, intending to wait and see what will be the outcome of this erring people.

General Schenck's views on the suffrage question are somewhat original. He said:

If no other representative of the people makes the proposition before me, I pledge to you my promise that early in the next Congress I will propose this further amendment, that from this time forward, for all the States alike, the Constitution of the United States shall be so changed as that representation shall be founded upon voters, and not upon population. [Applause.]

Let us look into this matter, and I especially ask the attention of all democrats who may be present, for I want them to answer whether there is any thing anti-democratic or anti-republican in this proposition. By the present three-fifths rule, supposing the slaves still remain in bondage, the following were some of the results:

Maine, by the census of 1860, had a population of 628,959, and this population was allowed five representatives.

"Alabama had a population of 526,431, just 100,000 less than Maine, but she was allowed, under the three-fifths rule, seven members—two more than Maine.

"Vermont had a population of 314,369, upon which she was allowed three representatives.

"South Carolina had a population of 291,300—20,000 less than Vermont, and upon that, because of the large number of her slaves, she was allowed six representatives—twice as many as Vermont though Vermont has the greatest free white population.

"Pennsylvania, with a population of 2,849,266 is allowed twenty-four representatives, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Florida, Mississippi and Louisiana, all combined, have an aggregate free population of 2,629,185—10,000 less than Pennsylvania alone—and yet they are allowed thirty-nine representatives—fifteen more than the same population in a free State.

"But let the Constitution of the United States stand unchanged, slavery being extinguished, and what will follow? Why, that the other two fifths will be represented, and how many of these are there in the slave States? 1,380,212 more will be represented, when you come to add the other two fifths. This will give to the South, in addition to the great advantage she already has, fourteen more votes in Congress. Then the Southern States I have mentioned in connection with Pennsylvania will have fifty votes in Congress, to her twenty four, while having only the same voting population.

"By the adoption of the amendment to the Constitution that I propose, it is true that it may become a question with the people of Ohio whether they will, in case the South enfranchises its black population in order to get a representation for them, do the same for the colored people. For myself, I am willing to meet the South on this ground. If they can afford to give the ballot to their millions, surely we can afford to give it to our thousands.

"But this is a question for the future and I shall not discuss it now. Let us amend the Constitution so as to make it to the interest of the Southern States to have their negroes vote if they think proper. In the process of time as the negroes become educated and fitted for the right of suffrage, if they wish to widen their representation by giving them the right to vote, well and good. But, until they do that, they must stand where they do in regard to representation.

This is the platform upon which I stand. I shall not discuss the question whether we shall allow them to vote in any of the States. I would simply so amend the Constitution in favor of freedom and in favor of equal representation as that these people shall see it to their interest to let every intelligent lover of freedom vote and give them the privilege of so doing if they choose.

PROFESSOR JACKSON, GEOLOGIST.—The following treatise on the structure and mineral constitution of the globe, its physical features, etc., was given by Professor Jackson, State Geologist of Massachusetts, in a recent lecture before the Rincon School, San Francisco. The principal heads of the lecture were:

"First, The speculations of ancient astronomers as to the origin of our planetary system, one of which was that the entire system was at one time a vast circle of matter, having the sun for its centre, and that it broke up into fragments, each fragment forming a separate sphere. Next he entered upon positive geology. The fact he said, that the earth was once in a plastic state, is demonstrated by its spheroidal form, having a convexity at the equator twenty six miles greater than at the poles. This fact he [illegible] as the result of a centrifugal [illegible]. That the earth was at one time a mass of heated matter [illegible] is known from the increasing temperature found in sinking artesian wells. The temperature above our atmosphere is [illegible] one hundred degrees below zero. This [illegible] proved by meteorolites, which while melted on the surface by their velocity in passing through the air, have on arriving at the earth [illegible] so cold [illegible] taking hold [illegible] that if the whole body of the earth were to [illegible] its entire [illegible] it would drink in five times a[illegible] on the globe, and in the air [illegible] all the earth [illegible]. Such, he said, was [illegible] condition of our satellite the moon. That it had at one time been invested with an atmosphere and had its surface [illegible] with lakes [illegible], but its internal fires having in some [illegible] extinguished, [illegible] became a thirsty absorbent, and drank in all its water and even its atmosphere. Meteorolites the lecturer [illegible] of the old world as they were turned out by the hand of nature. These [illegible] their having the same elements [illegible] the presence of water at the time they were formed. The specific gravity of the earth formed the subject of a few remarks. The concrete globe being 5, while the rocks themselves are but 2½. The speaker proceeded to speak of the elementary components of the earth, its chemical properties and phenomena. From this he passed into the classification of rocks and their origin. Under this head he treated of the different coal formations, referring descriptively to those of the East and the Pacific Coast. Speaking of the varieties of coal, he said that anthracite, bituminous and semi-bituminous coals are homogeneous in their elementary compounds, but their difference depended upon different chemical agencies acting upon them during the period of their formation.

JOHNSON AND THE REBELS.—The following conversation between President Johnson and several prominent rebels will be found interesting:

Some fifty persons were present, most of them asking pardon. A Mr. Keitt, of South Carolina (not Lawrence M., he having been killed by a loyal bullet at Fort Wagner) approached the President and informed him that he desired a pardon. "What have you done?" asked Mr. Johnson. "I opposed secession until my State decided to go out of the Union, and then I determined to go with it. I never joined the army. I did nothing to bring on the rebellion," was the reply. "You," rejoined the President, "are like all the rest; you did nothing." "Now," he added, "my experience is that the men who didn't join the rebel army, but who acquiesced in the rebellion, were the most mischievous and dangerous men we had. I cannot pardon you, sir." Mr. Keitt made several other efforts. Among other things he reminded the President that he had come all the way from South Carolina and had been in Washington some time; that hotel living here was very high, and that altogether his daily expenses were extravagantly large, and that he would like to get away as soon as he could go. The President responded that the hardships of which he complained were the direct results of the rebellion; that he did not bring on or contribute to bring on the rebellion; that he was not responsible for and could not extricate Mr. Keitt from the difficulties he complained of, nor hasten his pardon on account of them. The President was firm. His answer was a finality. [Exit Keitt.]

A Mr. Birch, member of the late rebel Legislature of Virginia, next approached the President and applied for a pardon. Similar questions were put to him by the President as were asked Mr. Keitt. From the answers it appeared that Mr. Birch did nothing only as a member of the Virginia Legislature, in obedience to instructions he voted that Virginia should secede from the Union of the United States. That is all he did; that was—"nothing." The President refused to pardon him. [Exit Birch.] Next came a rebel clergyman who asked the President to grant him a pardon. "What great sin have you committed that you come here in clerical robes and claim executive pardon?" "I was a rebel," was the answer, "and I desire your Excellency to pardon me, that I may be restored to citizenship and be able to support and live under the Government of the United States." "You rebel preachers," responded the President, "have done the Government a great deal of harm. You have proclaimed devilish doctrines that misled the people. You forgot that it was your duty to yield obedience to the powers that be. You must rest awhile upon the stool of repentance. I decline to grant you pardon at present." [Exit rebel clergyman.]

The President then remarked, addressing the entire crowd in the room, that it was a little singular that most of the non-combatants who had come here from the South for pardon assert that they did nothing, were opposed to the rebellion at the beginning, only acquiesced, and thought the rebel government ought to have surrendered earlier and stopped bloodshed, yet not one of them took advantage of the amnesty proclamation offered by Mr. Lincoln, an act which would have shown sincerity on their part and contributed so much towards saving the enormous expenditure of life and treasure. "I will grant no more pardons for the present," was the emphatic conclusion of the President, and turning to Colonel Browning, he directed him to issue an order to the Attorney General."

General Sherman attended a picnic near Lancaster, Ohio, when on a visit to his old home in that city, recently. A good many of his old soldiers were present, and he gave the boys and the people generally, one of his highly interesting and instructive talks. One of his points will command attention:

"When the rebels ventured their all in their efforts to destroy our Government, they pledged their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honors to the cause—the Government accepted their wager of battle. Hence, when we conquered, we, by conquest, gained all they had—their property became ours by conquest. Thus they lost their slaves, their mules, their horses, their cotton, their all; and even their lives and personal liberty, thrown by them into the issue, were theirs only by our forbearance and clemency. By this right of conquest we own this ground we stand on to-day, conquered from the Indians, the Shawnees, I believe. The State of Ohio is ours by conquest from the French and English. So, soldiers, when we marched through and conquered the country of these rebels we became owners of all they had, and I don't want you to be troubled in your consciences for taking, while on our great march, the property of conquered rebels. They forfeited their rights to it, and I, being agent for the Government to which it belonged, gave you authority to keep all the quartermasters couldn't take possession of, or didn't want."

THE WEALTH OF VIRGINIA.—A correspondent who was with the party which explored the Virginia gold regions writes enthusiastically of the treasure fields of that State. Twenty five mines in Buckingham, Goochland and Fluvanna counties, situated west of Richmond on the line of the James river canal, were visited. At some of these the owners have hitherto been content with merely surface washing, although millions of dollars are lying invitingly under their very feet. At others they have sunk a shaft or two a slight depth in the earth and then abandoned the work at the very time when they had reached the richest part of the mine. The owners are doing nothing to develop this wealth, because they are both indolent and poor. A Virginia gentleman is not in the habit of rolling up his sleeves even to wash gold, and the most of them have no capital to sink other's work. Their former ambition being to increase the breadth of their estates and the number of their negroes, the mines have been neglected, and like the dog in the manger they grudged it all who would like to have improved what he despised. But the battering rams of war have at last broken down the Chinese wall of envy and prejudice and churlishness that resisted the incursions of Northern enterprise and capital, and if the glittering of the treasure shall through the breaches strike the eye of our active acquisitive population, an influx of emigration such as California witnessed is predicted upon the gleaming soil of the Old Dominion.

TAWKESKERS IN ARKANSAS.—[illegible]

To shake off trouble, you must set about doing good to somebody; put on your hat, and go and visit the poor; inquire into their wants and administer unto them; seek out the desolate and oppressed, and tell them of the consolations of religion. I have often tried this, and found it the best medicine for a heavy heart.—Howard

ALLEN'S

LUNG BALSAM!

The Remedy for Curing

CONSUMPTION, COUGHS, COLDS,

Asthma, Croup,

Diseases of the Throat, Bronchitis, Pains and Oppression of the Chest and Lungs, Difficult Breathing and all the Diseases of the Pulmonary Organs.

ITS ACTION IS EXPECTORANT, ALTERATIVE, SUDORIFIC, SEDATIVE, DIAPHORETIC AND DIURETIC, which renders it one of the most valuable remedies known for curing diseases of the lungs. It excites expectoration and causes the lungs to throw off the phlegm or mucus. CHANGES THE SECRETIONS AND PURIFIES THE BLOOD; heals the irritated parts, gives strength to the digestive organs, brings the liver to its proper action and imparts strength to the whole system. Such is the immediate and satisfactory effect, that it is WARRANTED TO BREAK UP THE MOST DISTRESSING COUGH IN A FEW HOURS TIME, if not of too long standing. IT IS WARRANTED to give entire satisfaction even in the MOST CONFIRMED CASES OF CONSUMPTION. IT IS WARRANTED NOT to produce costiveness (which is the case with most remedies) or affect the head, as it contains no Opium in any form. IT IS WARRANTED TO BE PERFECTLY HARMLESS to the most delicate child, although it is an active and powerful remedy for restoring the system. THERE IS NO REAL NECESSITY FOR SO MANY DEATHS BY CONSUMPTION, when ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM will prevent it if only taken in time.

Sold by all Druggists. Price $1 per bottle.
